Ethnic inequalities continue to feature as a cause for concern for black and minority ethnic (BME) clients accessing mental health care services. This is despite significant investment in the Delivering Race Equality in mental health care (DRE) initiative. There is an absence of empirical evidence of effective strategies and approaches to redress inequalities.

The purpose of the conference is to raise awareness of the critical role that all sectors can play in enhancing care pathways for BME service users. The conference will showcase some of the latest cutting edge theory, thinking and practice to address mental health inequities and aligns well with current national mental health policy which advocates the importance of a whole system wide approach.

After you have attended this conference you will:

- Understand the importance of a whole system wide approach to tackling mental health inequalities
- Realise the role of psychiatry in leading different approaches to incorporating an understanding of the context of people’s lives into treatment and care
- Appreciate models of best practices

Course fees: £90. All learning materials, lunch and refreshments are included.

Who should attend? This conference is suitable for staff from clinical commissioning groups, NHS organisations and for-profit mental health provider organisations, Department of Health, NHS confederation mental health network and the third sector.
