

Hearts and Minds

Wednesday 16 October 2019

The Met Hotel, King Street, Leeds, LS1 2HQ

9am Registration, 9.30am Welcome and 4.30pm, Close

Psychiatrists and other mental health professionals are becoming increasingly aware of the cardiac effects of the drugs that their patients are prescribed. Electrocardiographs (ECGs) are being regularly recommended in monitoring patients, but reading and interpreting them is a skill that you may not have practiced for some time.

The conference is designed to improve your ECG skills and use them in practical scenarios. You will also receive an update on the cardiac effects of psychotropic medication and cardiac medication that many of our patients are currently prescribed

This course aims to provide delegates with:

- Understand the effects of antipsychotic, antidepressant and other psychiatric medications of the heart
- Understand the effects of cardiovascular medications that psychiatric patients often take
- Have increased confidence and abilities in reading ECGs
- Be able to apply these skills in clinical settings
