

Assessing Fitness to Plead and Fitness to be Interviewed

Tuesday 22 January 2019

Weetwood Hall Estate, Otley Road, Leeds LS16 5PS

12.00pm Registration and Lunch , 12.30pm Welcome and 4.45pm, Close

The outcome of your comment on a person's fitness to be interviewed and fitness to plead will greatly impact the Criminal Justice Process, and you may be asked to justify your findings in court.

This seminar gives you a good understanding of the processes. You will learn the difference between the assessments of fitness to be interviewed by the police, and fitness to plead in court. You will learn about the safeguards and consequences for people found unfit. The outcome of this seminar is for you to enable fair, robust and legal procedures on behalf of mentally disordered detainees and allow you to give reliable evidence in court.

After attending this Essentials course you will:

- be able to give evidence in court to support your findings
- understand the process of assessing fitness to be interviewed and fitness to plead
- understand the safeguards for those found unfit

About our speakers:

Malcolm Taylor was with the Crown Prosecution Service since its inception in 1986 until he retired at the end of 2014. His areas of expertise include homicide, shaken and battered babies, corporate manslaughter, large and complex fraud, undercover investigations, and unusual and sensitive cases. He most relevantly took a case on fitness to plead all the way to the House of Lords shortly after the current legislation came into force.

Dr Mike Ventress is dual trained in forensic and adult psychiatry. He has worked in both medium and low secure settings as a consultant forensic psychiatrist for ten years. He has substantial experience in providing opinions for solicitors, courts and the Crown Prosecution Service in respect of fitness to plead, often in complex cases. He has a particular interest in mental health law and has a Master's degree in the subject. He is co-author of a paper on fitness to be interviewed published in Advances in Psychiatric Treatment.
