12.00noon Registration with Lunch, 12.30pm Welcome and 4.45pm, Close

Most adult psychiatrists have some patients who have not responded to treatment. Following the evidence is all very well, but what happens when the evidence runs out?

The course will review the latest research findings in treatment refractory psychosis. But you can find that on Pubmed. In this area of practice there is often little or no evidence base to guide us, and we have to rely on the collective experience of experts specialising in treatment resistant psychosis. The speakers will share several decades of collective experience treating such patients, and of using clozapine. There is also the opportunity for the delegates to share their own experiences and insights with the group.

This workshop has consistently received excellent feedback – it is an opportunity to learn from one another’s experiences.

Delegates attending this course will:
- Update their knowledge of the evidence base in treatment resistant psychosis
- Learn how to approach specific clinical problems

About our speakers:
Dr James MacCabe, conducts research into the causes and consequences of psychoses using the tools of lifecourse epidemiology. Much of his research is conducted in collaboration with international partners in Sweden and elsewhere. More recently Dr MacCabe’s research at the Institute of Psychiatry, Psychology and Neuroscience (IoPPN) has focussed on treatment refractory schizophrenia and its treatment, including the use of stratified medicine.

Professor Sukhwinder Shergill, is Professor of Psychiatry and Systems Neuroscience at the IoPPN and consultant psychiatrist at SLaM. His research explores the brain mechanisms underlying psychosis and the testing of novel treatments.

Dr Fiona Gaughran is the Lead Consultant in the National Psychosis Service at the South London and Maudsley NHS Foundation trust (SLaM). , Dr Gaughran is responsible for implementing new, evidence-based approaches to help people with psychotic illnesses that have been resistant to treatment. Her current research interests are largely focused on the interface between physical health and severe mental illness and on the management of psychosis. She has published a number of book chapters and recently co-edited a book on Treatment Refractory Schizophrenia.
