

Attachment Narratives & CBT in Complex Cases

Friday 11 October 2019

The Met Hotel, King Street, Leeds, LS1 2HQ

9am Registration, 9.30am Welcome and 4.30pm, Close

Attachment theory deepens our understanding of the person from a developmental perspective. Combining insights from CBT and attachment theory will help to offer a more attuned and effective intervention in a time limited fashion. This approach would be useful to psychiatrists, nurses, social workers and community team members, who manage complex clients. The presentation is built upon on 3 detailed case studies of people presenting with trauma, depression, anxiety and dissociation. The discussion around cases will help to understand the importance of adult attachment patterns in clinical practice. An integrated case formulation can inform how combination of CBT techniques and relational approach can help people with chronic and complex problems.

After attending this course, delegates will be able to:

- Assess adult attachment patterns in the clinic through developmental history, narratives and through therapeutic relationship
- Create an integrated formulation using Attachment & CBT theories
- Adapt therapeutic interventions informed by underlying attachment patterns

About our speaker:

Dr P J Saju, Consultant Medical Psychotherapist, SWYFT has worked as a consultant psychiatrist and medical psychotherapist in the NHS for many years. He has practiced CBT from the start of his psychiatric career from 1990. After working as a Consultant in adult psychiatry, he completed CCT in medical psychotherapy, majoring in CBT in 2009. He also completed MSc in Systemic Family Therapy in 2009. The training in family therapy helped to realise the central role of relationships in understanding and in resolving the person's predicaments. He also worked in a Therapeutic Community (2009-2011).

Course Feedback:

"Dr Saju was very approachable and helpful to all professions and experience levels."

"Very helpful. Increased my confidence and feeling legitimacy in using attachment theory in my practice."

"Increased understanding of attachment issues and influencing therapeutic relationship."
