

Depressive Illness in Older People

Monday 18 January 2021

Virtual Event Via Zoom

9am Registration, 9.30am Welcome and 4.30pm, Close

The remarkable growth of the population over the age of 65 means the detection, treatment and understanding of depression in older adults are of paramount importance and a major public health concern. This conference devoted to late-life depression will bring together prominent experts in this field in order to inform you of the multiple dimensions of this complex disorder. The aim of this conference is to heighten awareness and promote interventions for older people with depression during a time when there are on-going service changes throughout the health service.

This course aims to provide delegates with:

- Understand the distinct clinical challenges late life depressive presents
- Understand the interaction of depression with co morbid conditions
- Appreciate treatment optimisation both in terms of the psychological and pharmacological people in depression
