

Sexual Offenders: Not One Size Fits All.

"To be a sex offender in our society is to join the living dead" (quote Thaddaeus Birchard)

Tuesday 13 April 2021

Virtual Event via Zoom

5.45pm Registration/Login, 6.00pm Welcome and 8.00pm, Close

This talk will outline the many and varied ways that problematic sexual behaviour and offending in adults present to non-specialist psychiatrists (those not working in specialist clinics for sexual offenders). There will be an overview of psychodynamic concepts, comorbidities and approaches to safeguarding, treatment options, statutory and non-statutory interventions. The primary focus will be for the non-specialist practitioner to feel more confident in being able to take an appropriate history, including a provisional risk assessment and have an idea what options are available that could help within secondary care, while referring to safeguarding and criminal justice organisations where necessary.

This course aims to provide delegates with:

- Understand the approach undertaken within forensic psychiatry services and feel more confident regarding the role of mental health services in general.
- Feel more confident when problematic sexual thoughts, feelings and behaviours require interventions to safeguard potential victims.
- Know what treatment interventions can be accessed within general secondary services and to increase awareness of the benefits of non specific interventions (with reference to the Good Lives Model)

About our speaker:

Dr Clare Stephenson, has been working in Forensic Psychiatry for 12 years after obtaining a CCT in general adult psychiatry. Having received very little training in sexual disorders and offending, her learning has come from taking an active interest in reading the literature from both victim and perpetrator point of view. Sex offending, as a consequence of sexual and comorbid disorders are a common experience within the general and mental health community, but there remain significant gaps in service provision for this unmet need. Drawing upon her experience of service users in forensic services who present with sexual offences and the challenges of getting appropriate support and treatment for them.
