Tuesday 6 October 2015

12.30pm Registration and buffet lunch; 1.00pm Welcome and Introduction; 4.15pm Close
The Met Hotel, King St, Leeds, LS1 2HQ

If you care for patients, who may at some point in their journey require psychiatric intensive care (PIC), then this training will provide clarity about how the resource should be used.

The PICU sits at the interface between general psychiatry services, forensic services and the criminal justice system. This training will provide clarity about how you should use the resource. You will learn about how the interface with other agencies should work, getting a better understanding of this part of the system.

The workshop will first describe what psychiatric intensive care is; how it is defined, what makes PICU different from open wards and from long-term low secure wards. You will discuss what the “typical” PICU patient looks like, talk about multidisciplinary working on the PICU, security on PICUs, restrictive practices and the forensic interface.

Your improved understanding of this part of the system will be of benefit to staff, to relationships between professionals and ultimately to patients.

The training will be interactive, please bring case histories relevant to psychiatric intensive care to discuss.

After you have attended this seminar, you will have:
- An understanding of what psychiatric intensive care is
- A better understanding about who should be referred to psychiatric intensive care
- An awareness of where PICU sits in both the general psychiatric system and at the forensic interface

About our speaker: Dr O’Brien is a Reader in Psychiatry and Education, St George’s University of London, where she is the lead for undergraduate psychiatry teaching. She is an Honorary Consultant in Psychiatric Intensive Care at South West and St. George’s Mental Health NHS Trust, where she is the joint consultant for a thirteen bed male psychiatric intensive care unit.

She is the director for education and training of the National Association of Psychiatric Intensive Care and Low Secure Units and has published widely in the area. She has developed a range of teaching materials about psychiatric intensive care.

Study methods: Lectures, discussions and question and answer sessions. The training will be interactive, please bring case histories relevant to psychiatric intensive care to discuss.
